A new car is a new car. You like it or you don't.

A new Mini is something else. It could be the end of a 10-year love affair or the start of another.

Well, we're not going to break off a great relationship.

The classic Mini shape will still be in the showrooms, still offering the finest value in motoring.

But something big has happened to the Mini range.

The new Mini Clubman.
The Big Happening.

First thing you'll notice about the Mini Clubman is the whole new front end. Bumper, headlamps, grille and the bonnet itself have been redesigned.

It's taken the best automotive designers we've got, two years of careful consideration to re-style the Mini. And it shows.

That's not all. It's a big happening inside the Mini Clubman too.

For the first time a Mini has wind-up windows set in padded doors.

Then there's air-flow ventilation out of a brand new fascia.

The seats are new.

The steering wheel's new.

In fact there's so much new about the Mini Clubman, there's only one way to discover it all.

Go see it.

Let it happen.
